Information Technologies Fight Corruption

Abdullah Bin Fahid; PhD
Usefulness of Information Technology Against Corruption

- Use all around the world to effective means against corruption
- Reduce human involvement on governmental transactions
- Automation of the financial transactions
- Effective auditing
Information Technology and Bureaucracy

- Reduce transaction steps
- Reduce time and effort
- Increase transparency
- Improve effectiveness
- Enforce work process
Electronic Service and Transparency

- Cut the direct connection between the service provider and the beneficiary
- High level of auditing and documentation
- Apply clear roles across the board
- No room for exceptions
- Add sense of trust and confidence
Information Technology and Responsibility

- Clear rights and authorities from both sides, provider and receiver
- Effective monitoring and enforcement of chain of responsibility
- Enhance the level of command and control
- Ease the process internal and external review and investigation information Technology Challenge

- Information security
- Privacy
- Information auditing
- Information quality control
- Computer crimes and misuse
- Change resistance
- Training
E-Government Initiative in Saudi Arabia

- Start on 2006
- Automation of all governmental transactions
- Automation of information exchanges across all governmental departments and agencies
- Financial Funds
- Steering committee
- Establishing YASSER program
Ministry of Interior IT Accomplishments

- Automation most of the services provided to citizens
- Automation of the work process inside the Ministry of Interior
- Huge investment on information technology infrastructure
- Training and awareness progress
- Documents management system and electronic archiving
- ERP system across all departments